I. INTRODUCTION

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused an extreme effect in numerous nations, especially creating ones. As indicated by the World Economic Situation and Prospects as of mid-2021, this worldwide emergency has "obviously demolished destitution and inside country imbalance", and it is normal that "will leave dependable scars on work markets, while switching progress on neediness and pay disparity in numerous economies." The setting in India in this sense, is mind boggling.

Last year, the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, Michelle Bachelet, cautioned about the impacts of the "unexpected declaration" of a lockdown in the country. She stresses the need to guarantee that actions to counter COVID-19 are neither oppressive "nor fuel existing imbalances and weaknesses." Later, in June 2020, two UN Special Reporters alarmed about the "prosperity of in excess of 100 million inner transient labourers enduring difficulty after COVID-19 estimates constrained them to travel significant distances home, numerous by walking."

Through a triangulation strategy the task pointed toward analyzing the results of COVID-19 on the existences of these people. 200 labourers living in the city of Bengaluru in the Indian territory of Karnataka, were essential for the review, every one of them being from different pieces of the country. Top to bottom meetings were directed to researchers, political pioneers, delegates from common society associations, project workers and senior labourers.

The shortfall of extensive information on home grown transient specialists makes it challenging to convey or contact them with monetary help, food security or medical care benefits proficiently. In spite of this, traveller labourers are the foundation of a few areas in the nation and their commitments are critical in framework advancement, food handling, fabricating, materials, security powers, home grown help and, surprisingly, in tea and cardamom ranches.

This study saw that practically 70% of the respondents were underneath the age gathering of 35, out of which 96% are hitched. Practically 70% of them were dropouts after elementary school training. These variables drive them to be day to day wage labourers since their chances are extremely restricted because of absence of instructive and proficient capabilities. No less than 83% of them relocated from country parts of India, and close to half of those referred to joblessness as a significant explanation, different thought processes being farming disappointments, catastrophic events and neediness.

In spite of the everyday costs being moderately high in enormous urban communities when contrasted with towns, their wages are extensively low causing unfortunate day to day environments including restricted or non existent public administrations, for example, water and sterilization, which is a basic thing in the midst of COVID-19, notwithstanding food deficiencies and ailing health. Sumit Kumar, a development specialist for over 10 years, clarified: "We live in little labourer sheds which neither can give quarantine spaces to the tainted, nor has adequate latrine offices. Getting isolated in such spaces will more nauseate. Food is a main pressing issue Hence, we can't make due without a task."

Besides, a large portion of the transients who returned because of the continuous pandemic had the test of making a trip to distant regions. Some contend that current arrangements have bombed in getting legitimate or social security for these weak gatherings. Sanjay Yadav, referenced that those "who got back to towns are as yet jobless." "Even the neighbours and relatives approach us with dread, we don't have cash to get back to the urban areas for occupations All of these are influencing us both intellectually and actually," he said. "More than the anxiety toward the infection, the fear of financial vulnerability irritates us," another respondent remarked.

III. CONCLUSION

I found the effort work to be an alternate encounter for me by and large. In spite of having been to a huge number of locations and met a wide variety of people, I have never felt so happy being around so many different migrant labor and their families with children, who are not even from the same social class as me. For me, being around these young people felt like a place of refuge. After showing them a great deal of things, they then showed me a lot of things such as being benevolent, respecting food and other things, being focused and so forth, and I began to think like them on different levels. There is a great deal of respect and adoration for these migrant labor and their families with children. In any case, they stored all that was shown or given to them in such a safe manner. This local area work is a very necessary and exhausting part of my schoolwork. Nevertheless, it was very diverse. They were amazed I learned so much. Apparently, they believed I was a holy messenger of amusement for their tiring lives. I cared very much for these kids as a result of their affection and respect. It became clear to me that I would have to do a lot for these migrant labor and their families with children. They would occasionally get food and chocolates from me. Few of these youngsters wore inappropriate clothing. Few of them were even given clothing by me. I also gained an understanding of certain expectations and associations these kids had. Due to the fact that these kids are the future of our country, I realized I had to show them everything I could. Each morning, I would get up and think of various things to show or do with them. I became liable for themselves as well as their learning. I needed to orchestrate and put together for their specialty and art material. What contacted me the most was that these youngsters even went up to learn on a day when it was pouring vigorously. All doused they sat anxiously and trusted that their educators will come and instruct them.

LEARNING OUTCOME

The NGO has helped me a lot in understanding the realities of the outside world.

I also came to know the real meaning of the societal world.

There are both negative and positive experiences of the training, some of which are:-

- Real experience of the world which help me a lot in understanding how really a society functions.
- Learned how to deal with the world and society.
- It helped me in improving my expectation towards the society.
- Learning many things regarding social work.
- Learning how to maintain balance in personal and professional life. Aspects Of Improvements Suggested.
- Firstly, interventions have to be strong. They have to draw on the best current knowledge of how to tackle the issues, applying it imaginatively in different context.
- Local views are not the only valid opinions about performance. But they can't be ignored. This is the single most important priority for reform.
